

Max Lytvyn

Co-Founder

Max Lytvyn co-founded Grammarly and currently focuses on long-term strategy.

Before helping build Grammarly, Max co-created MyDropBox, a plagiarism-detection company, and served as the Director of Product Strategy at Blackboard Inc. after it acquired MyDropBox. Max's favorite aspect of working at Grammarly is exploring new opportunities and puzzling out challenges. He's also inspired by working with and learning from a values-driven, talented team.

Max is a member of the Forbes Tech Council and has been featured in The Wall Street Journal, Forbes, and Fast Company.

Max earned a BBA in information systems at the International Christian University in Kyiv and holds an MBA from Vanderbilt University.
